8	Blessing of the lobster fleet from the bridge to Badgers Island , with prior ceremony of historic reflection, at Jones Park flagpole. Kittery clergy participating. This event type typical of most towns with maritime histories.	6/9/2019 5:27 AM
9	There should be some sort of celebration.	6/5/2019 4:25 AM
10	street fest	6/4/2019 7:45 PM
11	I love the idea of bringing artists and cultural workers together to mark the occasion. Maybe also historians or biologists. I'm also thinking about the fact that we can't ignore the indigenous population, that called this place home, before settlers arrived. How can this part of the history be acknowledge in a way that feels genuine rather than token?	6/4/2019 11:30 AM
12	Waterfront re-enactment, a town lobster festival, invite President Trump to attend	6/4/2019 10:44 AM
13	Historic site tours that EXPAND public understanding of everyday life in the Kittery of the past. Not tours of famous people's homes or the forts. For example, what was it like to take a ferry across the river to Portsmouth? Where did it leave from? What about taking a trolley to york beach? Did people build their own houses or hire someone? When did residents stop using thatch rooves? Stop burning wood and start burning coal? What about the sleeves that supposedly used Stan and Heidi's purple house on government street to cook for Samuel badger or his ancestors?	6/4/2019 7:54 AM

Kittery 375th Celebration

14	(Time capsule only if it is done by kids as part of a school learning module or some group of people who aren't usually involved in town activities and might benefit from feeling like part of the history.) I think it is extremely important to find ways to help the public recognize that there were people for whom the area was home prior to colonization by Europeans. Partly this is a matter of respect, but also it can help current residents think about the longer term past of the town, and how that might inform its longer term future. Otherwise, it is easy for this kind of commemorative event to portray European settlement as the only important historical focus. If done thoughtfully, it might instead become an opportunity to gently raise questions of social diversity and environmental stewardship.	6/4/2019 7:40 AM
15	Save $$ by doing nothing!	6/4/2019 7:34 AM
16	Adult and youth field day	6/4/2019 7:23 AM

7	Just add a day to the Block Party and you're done - seriously!	6/20/2019 4:04 AM
8	Thank you for our leaders who work for our town. I hope our town will have a great success this coming year!	6/20/2019 4:00 AM
9	It would be positive to include students in planning events or in doing background research about the town.	6/13/2019 10:51 AM
10	Fingers crossed, it will coincide with opening of expanded and renovated library, and could include cross-over events.	6/11/2019 5:14 AM
11	Maybe the celebration could be combined with the block party	6/10/2019 4:47 PM
12	I remember when the Town celebrated the 325th. We had activities in school, and athletic competitions for kids with special commemorative medals.	6/10/2019 11:02 AM
13	Memorabilia should be made for those wishing to purchase. Events throughout the year at Kittery Historic Museum, Fort Foster, Fort McClary, John Paul Jones Park, Schools, Community Center, Library and PNSY. Children could design a history coloring book that could be sold. Perhaps a mural on Key Bank's wall. Various businesses and folks in town could offer history lessons about their part of town. Perhaps the Kittery Historical Museum could be the primary coordinator.	6/5/2019 6:44 PM
14	Thank you for soliciting suggestions.	6/4/2019 11:30 AM
15	Do not make this a political event.	6/4/2019 10:44 AM
16	Events should be family friendly and open to all income levels	6/4/2019 8:18 AM
17	Hope we'll be celebrating the role of the common man and woman in our town and our states history, not retracing the same tired stories about a few wealthy gentlemen.	6/4/2019 7:54 AM
18	see above	6/4/2019 7:40 AM
19	Free admission to Forts Foster and McClary for Kittery residents the week or month of the celebration would be a nice bonus.	6/4/2019 7:28 AM
20	How exciting!	6/4/2019 7:10 AM
